About Erika

Erika Biro is a well-recognized lecturer on international politics, arts and culture. She has written commentary, been involved with political analysis for television, and has travelled extensively around the world studying global affairs. Since 1980, Erika has been conducting her own course: “Current Affairs with Erika Biro.”

In 1939, Erika and her parents fled from Hungary to Lima, Peru, where she grew up and was educated in the British school system. Erika speaks four languages fluently: English, Spanish, French, and German. In 1953, she won a scholarship to the Sorbonne in Paris, France, studying literature and observing the post World War II scene. In 1958, Erika attended the University of Toronto to continue her studies. She graduated in Modern Languages and Literature and taught Spanish at the University of Toronto from 1965-1970.
